The latest production in the My Music series focuses on the years 1965-1969 and includes essential folk rock, R&B and pop hits from the decade of change, peace, love and protest music.

3. HEALTH CARE AND SCIENCE

Radio Times on TV

5/2/08 8:00pm 60 minutes

Dr. Daniel Gottlieb is a psychologist and family therapist who is nationally recognized as a mental health expert. He writes a column, Inside Out, for the Philadelphia Inquirer and hosts an award-winning radio talk program, Voices in the Family, which airs on WHYY-FM, Philadelphia's NPR affiliate. Over the years, Dan has endeared himself to millions with his gentle and poignant words, on how to deal with many of life's unexpected challenges. The advice has a greater meaning because it comes from a man who has experienced numerous forms of loss in his own life. At the age of 33, Dan Gottlieb suffered a spinal cord injury that left him a quadriplegic. Gottlieb joins host Marty Moss-Coane to discuss his book, Lessons from the Heart, and to share his wisdom on making the most out of life.

Depression: Out of the Shadows

5/21/08 9:00 pm 60 Minutes

Depression: Out of the Shadows, profiles people of different ages and cultural backgrounds who are living with depressive disorders and explores causes and treatment.

Nova "Saved by the Sun"

6/3/08 7:30 pm 60 Minutes

As the earth heats up and the price of fossil fuel soars, scientists, businesses and citizens are exploring a clean, renewable source of power: the sun. Derrick Pitts of the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia is live in the WHYY-TV studio to help present this new NOVA report, which shines light on how and why people across the U.S. and the world are "going solar" and investigates whether or not solar technologies will ever make a significant impact on the accelerating energy demands of the global economy.

4. Environment

Jean-Michel Cousteau: Ocean Adventures

4/6/08 7:00pm 60 minutes

Holding one-fifth of the world's river water, the Amazon travels through nine countries, with an outflow nearly 12 times larger than that of the Mississippi. There are more species of fish in the Amazon than in the entire Atlantic Ocean. Human enterprise and development not only compromise the health and ecology of these waters, but inflict global consequences.

Frontline: Storm over Everest

5/13/08 9:00pm 120 minutes

As darkness fell on May 10, 1996, a fast moving storm of unimaginable ferocity trapped three climbing teams high on the slopes of Mount Everest. The climbers, exhausted from their summit climb, were soon lost in darkness, in a fierce blizzard, far from the safety of High Camp at 26,000 feet. World-renowned climber and filmmaker David Breashears returns to Everest to tell the story of the climbers who perished in that storm, marking the worst climbing tragedy in Mount Everest's history. But more remarkably, it is the story of eleven climbers caught in the storm and the eyewitness accounts of their astonishing survival in the world's most unforgiving environment.

Nature

6/29/08 8:00pm 60 minutes

As Africa's largest predator, the lion should have nothing to fear. But in fact, the king of the savannah is facing an uncertain future. The number of lions is fewer than 30,000. Lion experts, farmers and Masai herdsman try to figure out why.

5. Health Insurance

Issues PA 2008

5/11/08 1:00pm 60 minutes

Topics include:

- o If we could re-invent health care, what might it look like?
- o How does the high cost of health care hinder the economy?
- o Bio-technology and new health care facilities seem to be a driving force in the economy, but are we paying more for health care because we keep creating new health care facilities?
- o Penn State University's public health policy is considered cutting edge. Can it be duplicated throughout the state?
- o Gun violence in Pennsylvania's largest cities has become epidemic and some experts say violence has become a public health care crisis. It's not only the violent acts themselves that are costing us all, but professionals say residents of communities where violence is common suffer a host of health problems related to their environment, from high blood pressure to obesity to physical and emotional trauma.
